

Backdrops:

The great thing about my system is how customizable it is. Custom backdrops can set the tone of the image. So far in the demo I have used mostly a black backdrop but you can use any type you want. Here are some example I made or bought.

I personally like to stick with neutral colors, like black, white and gray. But I do use more interesting backdrops from time to time. A great place to get interesting stuff is anyplace that sells scrap-book supplies like Michael's. I bought these pieces for about 89 cents each.

As you can see they each give a different feeling to the photograph. This is a good way to frame your beads in the image you want people to perceive them.

Are your beads upscale high end pieces or is it new wave funky counter culture? Think about it, it will come in handy if you plan on marketing your work.
